1Charlotte Workers Compensation Lawyer Reports Interstate 85 Crash Data Analysis for Cabarrus County

March 12, 2026

CHARLOTTE, NC - March 12, 2026 -
1Charlotte Workers Compensation Lawyers Car Accident Law Firm has compiled data highlighting crash patterns along Interstate 85 through Cabarrus County, where recent statistics show 5,755 crashes resulted in 2,003 injuries and 28 fatalities. The analysis focuses on the interstate corridor that serves as a primary route for Concord's 115,053 residents commuting to Charlotte and surrounding areas.

The data compilation reveals that the I-85 corridor through Cabarrus County experiences frequent multi-vehicle collisions, with recent incidents causing lane closures near mile marker 59 in the Dale Earnhardt Boulevard area. The Concord Mills Boulevard intersection has been identified as a high-congestion zone during peak travel periods.

According to North Carolina Department of Transportation statistics, nearly half of the state's 273,656 crashes occur at intersections, with the I-85 corridor representing a significant portion of Cabarrus County's total crash incidents. The data indicates that morning and evening rush hours present the highest risk periods for collisions along this stretch of interstate.

"The data shows clear patterns of increased crash frequency during peak commuting hours along the I-85 corridor," stated a spokesperson for 1Charlotte Workers Compensation Lawyers. "Interstate accidents often involve multiple vehicles and jurisdictions, which creates complex liability scenarios that differ from standard surface road collisions."

The analysis examined crash data from the North Carolina Department of Transportation's most recent reporting period, focusing specifically on the segment of I-85 that runs through Cabarrus County. This section of interstate carries an estimated tens of thousands of vehicles daily, with traffic volume significantly increasing during weekday commute times.

Interstate accidents present distinct characteristics compared to other roadway crashes. Higher travel speeds, the presence of commercial vehicles, and chain-reaction collisions contribute to both the frequency and severity of injuries reported along major interstate corridors. The data shows that crashes involving commercial vehicles on I-85 often result in more severe injuries and extended traffic disruptions.

The firm's analysis also noted that interstate crashes frequently involve drivers from multiple states, adding jurisdictional complexity to accident reporting and insurance claim processes. This factor becomes particularly relevant given I-85's role as a major north-south transportation corridor connecting multiple southeastern states.

"The concentration of crashes along this transportation corridor affects thousands of Cabarrus County families who depend on I-85 for daily travel," added the spokesperson. "Understanding crash patterns and high-risk areas helps drivers make informed decisions about travel routes and timing."

The data compilation comes as transportation officials continue monitoring crash trends along major interstate corridors throughout North Carolina. The I-85 corridor remains under observation as one of the state's most heavily traveled interstate segments.
